PROFILE

Produced with grapes from the main white varieties of the Alentejo, Roupeiro (60%) and Arinto (40%). The grapes were harvested in the 1st week of September during the night to protect and preserve all aromas of the grapes.

The varieties were vinified separately, fermenting at low temperatures. After a very gentle pressing the must underwent a cold static decanting, and was aged for seven days sur-lie fermentation took place in stainless steel vats at a controlled temperature. Part of the Roupeiro and Arinto fermented in new French oak barrels, having aged in the same barrels 5 months with "batonnage". The final lot was made in January 2020 and was then bottled.

TASTING NOTES

The Roupeiro gives up citrus and floral notes, and Arinto the acidity and freshness. It reveals a great aromatic finesse, with the delicate Roupeiro citrus and floral notes, and Arinto hints of orange and lemon, all involved by light smokiness. Full and creamy, deep and complex, with a long, fresh and very elegant finish.

HISTORY

Quinta do Carmo is located in the Alentejo region, a few kilometers from the city of Estremoz. It is a typical property of the Alentejo, with a total area of 1000 ha, include 100 hectares of olive trees, cereals, crops and forests of cork oak trees. After a long joint venture with the prestigious group Lafite Rothschild, Bacalhôa Wines of Portugal acquired the entire Quinta in 2008. The winery at Quinta do Carmo became the center for winemaking and production of all wines from the Alentejo belonging to the Bacalhôa group. The cellar underwent significant renovations in terms of technology and techniques for wine making, and was designed with modern and attractive features.
